While the unemployment rate is at a three-year low, it remains a key topic in this year's election.

Economy Open To Interpretation

Whether the job market feels stronger depends on your perspective

Washington

Month by month, the U.S. job market is regaining its health. So many jobs are being added that the unemployment rate has dropped for five straight months. At 8.3 percent, it's at a three-year low.

Whether the job market actually feels stronger, though, depends on your perspective. The headline numbers mask vast disparities — from the New Yorker thrilled to have found a catering job to the Indianapolis truck driver forced to take a 40 percent pay cut to work again.

Even where hiring has picked up, scars from the Great Recession remain. In Fort Madison, Iowa, Pinnacle Foods Group is expanding a canned-meat plant and adding 65 jobs. Yet that same work

A Second Term?

President Obama says he deserves re-election despite the nation's economic troubles. Obama said in a pre-Super Bowl interview on NBC that his administration is creating more than 250,000 jobs a month, the most since 2005 and a reversal from the 750,000 jobs the economy was losing three years ago. Americans divide evenly on whether Obama's performance warrants a second term. According to a Washington Post-ABC news poll released Sunday, 49 percent think Obama deserves a second term as president, 49 percent don't think he does, and 2 percent have no opinion. (AP/THE WASHINGTON POST)

Unemployment Tough Odds

There are still more than four unemployed Americans, on average, for every job opening. In a healthy economy, by contrast, that ratio would be roughly 2-to-1. Sara Pereda, an executive assistant in New York City's entertainment industry, has applied for several job openings and received no responses, even though she's sure she was qualified. "You can send out 10 resumes and get one—and that's a maybe," Pereda says. (AP) used to be done at a company plant in Tacoma, Wash., that once employed 160 but has since closed.

A government report Friday that employers added a surprising 243,000 jobs in January ignited cheers for the job market, which had been slow to recover in the 2½ years since the recession officially ended. Many economists see signs of a self-fulfilling "virtuous cycle," in which more jobs fuel more consumer spending, which sparks further hiring and spending and more jobs.

Economic data this week could show whether Friday's unexpectedly strong jobs report was an aberration or a sign of a strengthening economy.

As more jobs have been created and the unemployment rate has edged downward, new claims for unemployment insurance have generally declined. But overall, the labor market is in better shape than it was a few months ago. PAUL WISEMAN (AP)/

Study: 1 in 5 Kids Exposed To Others' Smoke in Cars

Chicago

Texting while driving, speeding and back-seat hanky-panky aren't all that parents need to worry about when their kids are in cars: Add secondhand smoke to the list.

In the first national estimate of its kind, a report from government researchers says more than 1 in 5 high school students and middle schoolers ride in cars while others are smoking.

This kind of secondhand smoke exposure has been linked with breathing problems and allergy symptoms, and more restrictions are needed to prevent it, the report says.

With widespread crackdowns on smoking in public, private places including homes and cars are where people encounter secondhand smoke these days. Anti-smoking advocates have zeroed in on cars because of research showing they're potentially more dangerous than smoke-filled bars and other less confined areas.

The research, from the federal

Measures banning smoking in cars when children are present have been enacted in a handful of states and proposed in several others. (AP)

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, was released online Monday in Pediatrics.

Overall, 22 percent of teens and pre-teens were exposed to secondhand smoke in cars in 2009, the latest data available. That figure declined gradually during the decade, from 40 percent in 2000, the study found.

"The car is the only source of exposure for some of these children, so if you can reduce that exposure, it's definitely advantageous for health," said CDC researcher Brian King. LINDSEY TANNER (AP)

Wash. Blast Kills Father, 2 Sons

Graham, Wash.

The long, bizarre case of a Utah woman missing for two years took a horrific turn Sunday when a powerful house explosion killed the woman's husband and his two young sons, moments after the boys arrived for a visit that was supposed to be supervised by a social worker.

Authorities say it appears the husband, Josh Powell, blew up the house on purpose. The Child Protective Services worker brought the two boys to Powell's home, and Powell let his sons inside — but then blocked the social worker from entering, Graham Fire and Rescue Chief Gary Franz said. The social work-

Backstory

Josh Powell was under investigation in the disappearance of his wife, Susan Powell, 28, from their West Valley City, Utah, home in December 2009. He claimed he had taken the boys on a midnight excursion when she vanished. The case took a bizarre turn last year after Powell's father, Steve Powell, was arrested for investigation of voyeurism and possessing child pornography. er called her supervisors to report that she could smell gas. Moments later, the home exploded.

The children had been living with Susan Powell's parents since last fall. On Wednesday, a judge had denied an attempt by Josh Powell to regain custody, saying she wouldn't consider returning the two boys to their father until he underwent a psycho-sexual evaluation.

Jeffrey Bassett, a lawyer for Josh Powell, says he received a three-word email from his client minutes before the explosion that read, "I'm sorry, goodbye." Bassett said the email arrived at 12:05 p.m. Sunday, but he didn't see it until two hours later, when others informed him of the blast. (AP)

U.S. Pushes Support for Syrians

Washington urges an aid coalition after U.N. efforts stalled

Beirut

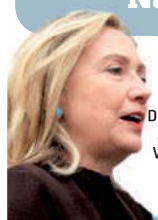

The U.S. proposed an international coalition to support Syria's opposition Sunday after Russia and China blocked a U.N. attempt to end nearly 11 months of bloodshed, raising fears that violence will escalate. Rebel soldiers said force was now the only way to oust President Bashar Assad, while the regime vowed to press its military crackdown.

The threat of both sides turning to greater force after Russia and China vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution raises the potential for Syria's turmoil to move into even a more dangerous new phase that could degenerate into outright civil war.

Regime opponents fear that Assad will be emboldened by the feeling he is protected by his top

Backstory ...

Syria's uprising, inspired by other Arab Spring revolts, began in March with peaceful protests against Assad's regime, sparking a fierce crackdown. In recent months, the rebel soldiers, known as the Free Syrian Army, have grown bolder. That has brought a heavier government response. More than 5,400 people have been killed since March, according to the U.N. (AP) ally, Moscow, and unleash even greater violence. At least 30 civilians were killed Sunday, according to the U.K.-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights.

The call points to the formation of a formal group of like-minded nations to coordinate assistance to the Syrian opposition, similar but not identical to the Contact Group on Libya, which oversaw international help for opponents of the late deposed Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi. In the case of Libya, the group also coordinated NATO military operations to protect Libyan civilians, something that is not envisioned in Syria.

U.S. officials said an alliance would work to further squeeze the Assad regime by stepping up sanctions against it, uniting disparate Syrian opposition groups providing humanitarian relief for embattled Syrian communities and working to prevent an escalation of violence.

The main Syrian opposition umbrella group, the Syrian National Council, backed the idea.

A deeply sensitive question is whether such a coalition would back the Free Syrian Army. There appears to be hesitation among Western countries, fearing further militarization of the conflict.

Giglio, Italy

Underwater operations aimed at readying the shipwrecked Costa Concordia for the removal of tons of oil from its tanks resumed Sunday, after days of stormy weather and rough seas abated.

Cairo

Ignoring a U.S. threat to cut off aid, Egypt on Sunday referred 19 Americans and 24 other employees of nonprofit groups to trial before a criminal court on accusations they illegally used foreign funds to foment unrest in the country.

Egypt's military rulers had already deeply strained ties with Washington with their crack-down on U.S.-funded groups promoting democracy and human rights and accused of stirring up violence in the aftermath of the uprising a year ago that ousted Hosni Mubarak.

The decision to send 43 workers from the various groups to trials marks a sharp escalation in the dispute. Sam LaHood, son of Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood, is among the Americans.

On Saturday, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton warned Egypt that failure to resolve the dispute may lead to the loss of U.S. aid.

Mitt Romney's big win in Nevada four days after his breakthrough victory in Florida spells big trouble for his remaining rivals. Simply put: Is there any way to stop Romney?

There is no question that Republicans have begun to coalesce around the former Massachusetts governor's candidacy in earnest. He swept nearly every voting group in Nevada, including those that have been slow to come aboard, such as tea party activists and voters who describe themselves as extremely conservative.

Ron Paul and Rick Santorum are fading fast, and it's becoming increasingly difficult for Newt Gingrich, who had been Romney's top rival, to chart a clear path to the nomination. He trails Romney in money, momentum and organization in upcoming states. And a calendar of primaries and caucuses favorable to Romney lies ahead.

"February is really the death march for second- and third-tier candidates," Republican strategist Rich Galen said. "If Romney sweeps February, the arc of his effort will be so strong, for most Republicans, it will be over."

A handful of states hold caucuses this week, including Maine, Minnesota and Colorado. Then comes a three-week lull until primaries on Feb. 28 in Arizona and Michigan, where Romney grew up and where his father served as governor.

Former Massachusetts governor Mitt Romney greets supporters in Las Vegas after winning the Nevada caucuses Saturday night.

Romney's confidence was clear as he stepped before cameras to claim his Nevada win, focusing on President Obama.

"I've walked in Nevada neighborhoods, blighted by abandoned homes, where people wonder why Barack Obama failed them. Mr. President, Nevada has had enough of your kind of help," Romney said to cheers.

"Our goal is to get to Super Tuesday, where we're in much more favorable territory."

— NEWT GINGRICH, ON SUNDAY, ON HIS PLANS TO STAY IN THE GOP RACE.

He barely acknowledged his GOP rivals, Gingrich included.

To be sure, Romney continues to face challenges.

He was at his best as a candidate after Gingrich won South Carolina and appeared to be a real threat going into Florida and beyond. Romney quickly retooled his approach, sharpening his attacks on Gingrich on the campaign trail and in two back-to-back debates.

But without a strong rival, Romney's weaknesses as a candidate and his propensity for gaffes become magnified.

He made an eye-popping unforced error this week, telling CNN, "I'm not concerned about the very poor." He went on to explain himself, saying those most in need can rely on social programs and that he wants to champion the middle class instead.

Still, Romney's position coming out of Nevada is strong and getting stronger. "When you match this up with Florida, it may well mean this is the beginning of the triumphant march to the nomination," said Galen, the GOP strategist. BETH FOUHY (AP)

Contenders Losing Hope

Newt Gingrich

Newt Gingrich's hope for a serious head-to-head contest with Romney diminishes with each loss. The former House speaker is short on cash, and Southern states likely to be most receptive to his candidacy do not hold contests until Super Tuesday, March 6. Nevertheless, Gingrich brushed aside all talk of quitting the race. He said he and his aides have spent much of the past four days retooling a campaign that twice has made him a leader in the polls, yet left him with only one victory (South Carolina) in five states.

Ron Paul

Ron Paul, who campaigned hard in Nevada and has staked his entire strategy on winning caucus states, may be bordering on irrelevancy after this shellacking. By raising expectations for a strong finish in Nevada — only to place a weak third — the Texas congressman undercut himself going into the next round of caucus contests. Paul's ultimate goal — keeping his libertarian-leaning platform part of the national political conversation — could also be damaged as his losses pile up.

Rick Santorum

Rick Santorum has watched his candidacy lose steam since his win in Iowa early last month. The former Pennsylvania senator spent little time campaigning in Nevada; his strong social conservatism was never a good fit in a state best known for drinking, gambling and legalized prostitution. He's looking ahead to caucuses in Colorado and the non-binding Missouri primary next week. But Santorum is still pulling in enough money — $1 million alone last week, his advisers say — to keep his shoestring operation alive. (AP)

Metro: Red Line to Suffer for Years

Agency says system needs maintenance, 877 more workers

Washington

Red Line riders won't get any relief soon.

That was the message from Metro officials Thursday as they warned that passengers on the system's busiest line can expect years of inconvenience.

Metro also detailed a need to hire 877 more workers to fix and maintain the aging system and operate new service.

Even after new track circuits and switches are installed on the Red Line over the next three years — safety upgrades recommended by the National Transportation Safety Board — Metro officials said there will be a “steady stream of maintenance” that will involve shutdowns and single-tracking.

The hiring would come as the agency faces a $116 million shortfall in its fiscal 2013 budget, expects to raise fares and asks local jurisdictions for larger subsidies. Metro plans to hold public hearings on its budget this month and next.

At Thursday's finance committee meeting, board member Mary Hynes, an alternate from Arlington County, questioned what appears to be a lack of progress.

“The real question on people's mind is ‘When is my ride going to get better?’” she said. “Three years kind of makes me gasp.”

According to officials and board members, Metro has for years neglected repairs and maintenance, and it downsized its engineering workforce.

“We didn't have enough people, and we didn't have enough funds,” said Rob Troup, assistant general manager of Metro's transit infrastructure and engineering services division.

For example, there is a backlog of about 75,000 rail ties — equipment that supports the rails — that need to be replaced, he said. Metro General Manager Richard Sarles had said in January that the authority would need to fill 1,017 new positions to operate the new Silver Line.

D.C. to Start Enforcing Red Meters

Transportation

The District will begin enforcing meters with distinctive red tops next month in an effort to provide parking for people with disabilities in some of the city's commercial areas.

The red top meters are reserved for drivers who display valid disability placards or license plates. These drivers can park at the meters for twice as long as the allotted time if they pay for that time period. The District will begin enforcing these meters on March 1, which means ticketing or towing vehicles that don't have the proper identification or haven't paid the parking fee.

There are nearly 400 of the red top meters installed in the central business district. (TWP)

Police: 11 Arrested At Occupy Camp

Officers clear away tents at McPherson Square protest site

Washington

Authorities say 11 people have been arrested in Washington's McPherson Square since Park Police began clearing away tents from one of the nation's last remaining Occupy sites on Saturday.

David Schlosser, who is a spokesman for the U.S. Park Police, said Sunday that one of those arrested was charged with felony assault on a police officer and assault with a deadly weapon.

That person is accused of hitting an officer in the face with a brick Saturday evening.

The officer was treated at a hospital.

Three others were charged with assault on a police officer.

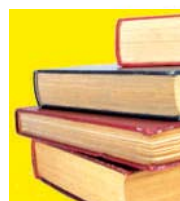

Schlosser says officials are continuing to clear the park of unsanitary conditions, though so far Sunday things remained mostly peaceful.

On Saturday night, the protesters vowed to continue their movement and urged followers to remain nonviolent.

On Sunday, Metro reopened the Vermont Avenue side of its McPherson Square station.

The transit agency said part of the station had been closed because of police activity related to clearing of the nearby McPherson Square park, which had been the scene of Occupy D.C. protests.

Metro spokesman Dan Stessel says U.S. Park Police gave approval to reopen the entrance about 12:30 p.m. on Sunday. (AP)

No More Excuses

The D.C. Public Library's fine forgiveness program has ended. Sunday was the last day for the "Check It In" amnesty program, which began in December. The program encouraged library patrons to turn in lost, overdue or damaged library materials. The library forgave all fines and fees. Children's books were exempt from the fines. A flat fee of $5 will now be imposed for books more than 30 days late. (AP)

Members of Congress are questioning why nobody has yet been prosecuted as part of a criminal investigation of mismanagement at Arlington National Cemetery.

The Army's inspector general testified that the Army has completed a criminal investigation but said any decision on whether to prosecute cemetery officials now rests with the Department of Justice.

The U.S. Attorney in the Eastern District of Virginia declined to comment. The reports of mislabeled graves prompted the Army to oust the cemetery's two top officials in 2010. (AP)

Huguely Trial Set
To Begin Monday

Attorneys say death of ex-athlete's former beau was an accident

Charlottesville, Va.

It's been nearly two years since University of Virginia lacrosse player Yeardley Love was found dead facedown in a pool of blood on a pillow in her bed.

Within hours, her ex-boyfriend, George Huguely V, a lacrosse player from Chevy Chase, Md., was charged in her death and jailed in Charlottesville, where he remains.

Beginning Monday in a courtroom here, the 12-member jury and three alternates who will hear the case against Huguely, 24, will be chosen from among 160 potential jurors.

By police accounts, Huguely is a willful, premeditating killer who said in a videotaped statement that he kicked through Love's bedroom door, shook her until her head banged against a wall and left her bleeding. On his way out, he took a computer and tossed it in a trash bin, say police, who recovered the laptop.

His attorneys counter that whatever happened during that final argument in Love's off-campus apartment was an "accident with a tragic outcome."

The fates of the two accomplished athletes on the verge of graduation from a prominent university have attracted and held national attention.

George Huguely V, from Chevy Chase, Md., is charged in the death of Yeardley Love.

Huguely chose not to appear in person for court proceedings that preceded his trial. He was indicted in April for first-degree murder, felony murder in a robbery or attempted robbery, robbery of a residence, burglary, entering a house with intent to commit a felony and grand larceny. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Backstory

Yeardley Love, also a lacrosse player at the University of Virginia, was the daughter of an investor, raised on an estate in a suburb north of Baltimore, educated at the private Notre Dame Prep, a girls' school. She played field hockey and lacrosse, volunteered at a soup kitchen and counseled in a summer camp program for kids from housing projects. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Bruins' Thomas Ices the Capitals

Goalie who skipped White House event dominates in D.C.

The Capitals

Tim Thomas' return to the nation's capital was less political and more successful.

Playing about 10 blocks from the White House — a place he famously avoided two weeks ago — Thomas carried a shutout deep into the third period Sunday as the Boston Bruins snapped a two-game losing streak with a 4-1 win over the Capitals.

4 Thomas' no-show, accompanied by a Facebook post about a federal government that he said was "out of control," overshadowed his teammates' day of celebration when the reigning Stanley Cup champions were honored by President Obama on Jan. 23. He didn't play the next day, when the Bruins lost 5-3 to the Capitals.

But last year's Vezina Trophy winner and playoff MVP was in fine form for a Super Bowl Sunday matinee, the first time all season he's played on back-to-back days. Among his 35 saves was a quick reflex stop against Alex Ovechkin when the Capitals forward had an open look after a rebound.

"Tim's capable of doing that for us, and he's done that a lot in the past," Boston coach Claude Julien said. "And I thought he was on top of his game today."

Thomas was booed pregame, but there's no telling how much of it was the standard disdain shown by Washington fans for any opposing star player.

"I think I'm pretty much booed at every arena, wouldn't you say?" Thomas said. "Even before anything happened?"

Marcus Johansson scored the lone goal for the Capitals, who have lost three of four and haven't scored a power-play goal in seven games. Washington also missed a chance to overtake the Florida Panthers once again for first place in the Southeast Division.

The Capitals also lost center Brooks Laich, who left the game after being hit into the boards by Dennis Seidenberg with 8 minutes remaining in the second period. Laich was walking on crutches and wearing a left knee brace after the game. Coach Dale Hunter said Laich was day to day.

Drenched in song and dance, 'Smash' aims to please Broadway fans with the theater bug

Television

NBC 10:00 Yea, though NBC walks through the valley of the shadow of death, all hope is not lost. "Smash," the network's easily engaging new drama about the making of a Broadway musical, turns out to be quite the little sunbeam. It has some endearing characters, an instinct for backstage meows and a firm grip on its own sense of camp control, which, if nothing else, sets it apart from Ryan Murphy's now fully atrocious "Glee."

Will "Smash," premiering Monday at 10 p.m., pull NBC back from its inexorable slide? Who knows; who cares? In another time and place, "Smash" would have the assured vibe of a hit. But in this time and this place (this too-smarmy, post-"Rent" place, where everyone thinks way too much about becoming a singing star), "Smash" too often swoons from an incurable disease known as the theater bug.

"Smash" won't convert anyone to the lifestyle, but it will intrigue those who are already deep in it.

Which makes sense, because this is a show made by and for people with a lifelong case of Broadway's restless leg syndrome. Breaking out into song and dance (with full accompaniment) is

Set Apart

Don't Compare

What "Smash" won't be, executive producer Neil Meron says, is a sort of "Glee" for adults, as some viewers may have assumed. "We don't think that it's anything like 'Glee,'" he says. "But we thank God for 'Glee,' because it got viewers used to watching people sing on TV dramas." One big difference: While "Glee" does covers of popular songs, "Smash" will introduce and compile original songs (splendidly conceived by Marc Shaiman and Scott Wittman of "Hairspray"). (AP) just a matter of course here, and whether you think that's wonderful or not depends entirely on your predisposition for spotlights. "Smash" won't convert anyone to the lifestyle, but it will intrigue those who are already deep in it. Let this be your litmus test: I'll put on a torn leotard and shout "Five, six, seven, eight!" and if you're still here by "eight," then "Smash" might be just the thing.

"Smash" has weaknesses, to be sure: Debra Messing's performance as Broadway musical writer Julia makes me think of chenille throws and long naps; the dialogue gets hacky; the ghost of "The Playboy Club" sends a chill through the chorus-girl dressing room scenes.

But "Smash" also has a confidence that speaks to its pedigree: Creator Theresa Rebeck is an accomplished playwright and TV producer/writer; and the show's other producers and writers have a wealth of stage and screen experience. That expertise makes the show feel special, enough so that Broadway junkies won't be disappointed.

HANK STUEVER (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Crossover Appeal: Siri — the occasionally sass-talking Apple digital assistant — is a crossover success. Her music career began small with a few YouTube duets, but she's hit the big time now with a Flaming Lips song, "Now I Understand," which is available for a limited time on SoundCloud. Amid an ethereal, electronic soundscape, Siri says, "Wayne, I don't understand the moon, the stars and the sun." She ends with, "Wayne. Now I understand." (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Muddled Experiments

With no star to truly shine, the musical duo the Internet fall short on their new album

Album Review

The producer duo of Matt Martians and Syd Tha Kyd, of the group OFWGKTA, miss the mark with their new album "Purple Naked Ladies," a spacey foray into digital sounds that results in more confusion than clarity.

Since it was recorded on Odd Future's own label, the two artists, known together as the Internet, have obviously been given a wide berth to play around with sounds and schemes. And they do. To a fault. The digital soundscape quickly becomes muddy and the musical purpose lost.

Track to Try

"She Dgaf" is the lone track for repeated play, curse words aside. It has a nice hook and some semblance of a beat, something most of this album lacks.

Some songs such as "Fastlane" offer a more traditional R&B approach. "Ode to a Dream" also promises something cohesive, with nice vocal features from Kilo Kish and Coco O. But the latter half of the song devolves into a swirl of reverse-played beats and tinny electronic drum hits. It's hard to image this as a radio staple or even a playlist favorite.

On "Violet Nude Women," it often sounds like there are no fewer than six instrumental sounds vying for attention, each attempting to elbow the others out of the way and take prominence. The melody is light and playful, but it soon gets lost as disparate noises collide.

The Internet is essentially a proof of concept group. They are decent producers, but they'll need a star up front to truly shine.

Role of a Lifetime

Elizabeth Taylor was many things: a talented actress whose first star turn came at age 12 in "National Velvet"; an international celebrity; and a voluptuous, violet-eyed, raven-haired beauty. But a feminist? In "The Accidental Feminist" ($23, Walker & Co.), cultural critic M.G. Lord maintains that Taylor was indeed that and makes a fairly persuasive case that Taylor, even if she didn't identify herself as a feminist, was such a commanding presence that she instinctively communicated empowering messages to women. How I Kept Your Secret

The end of Season 7 of 'Your Mother' is all about the two brides

Television

CBS 8:00 The mysteries that surround the CBS sitcom "How I Met Your Mother" extend to co-creator Craig Thomas' office on the Fox studio lot.

A white board that outlines the seventh season's episodes ends with Barney's wedding in the May finale and reads "___ is the bride."

That will be a pivotal episode: Not only will the ultimate bachelor come off the market, but the show has revealed it's also the day that Ted meets his future bride — the mother who is the concept upon which the show is built.

That doesn't necessarily mean viewers will meet the mother in that episode, however. Thomas and partner Carter Bays hold tight to their secrets. Stay tuned.

"How I Met Your Mother" cast members either scowl or half-smile at each other.

Time may make viewers more invested in the lives of Ted (Josh Radnor); buddy Barney (Neil Patrick Harris); Ted's and Barney's ex Robin (Cobie Smulders); and married couple Marshall and Lily (Jason Segel and Alyson Hannigan).

Many fans believe the mother should be revealed on the final episode. Others would like to see the future parents go through their first year of dating. This much Thomas will say: It will be one of those two possibilities.

That's why Thomas and Bays have some important meetings ahead of them. The actors are signed through the end of May 2013, so the producers will need to know soon whether the series is stretching beyond that. DAVID BAUDER (AP)

CW 9:00

Turn Back Time

Castle (Nathan Fillion, above) and Beckett investigate the murder of a treasure hunter who turns out to be connected to an unsolved homicide from 1947 on "Castle" (10:01 p.m., ABC). Johnathan Abraham, Aleiscia Sargeant Johnathan, 31, is a high school teacher for DCPS. Aleiscia, 28, is an insurance underwriter. They live in Capitol Heights, Md.

THE MAIN EVENT: They will wed Feb. 11 in Springfield, Va., with 100 guests in attendance. Aleiscia will walk down the aisle to "My Funny Valentine," the Chaka Khan version. HOW THEY MET: In college, they played against each other in a game of spades organized by Aleiscia's roommate. Both sides claim they won. FIRST DATE: A Valentine's Day concert on campus. "I asked him out, and, like a gentleman, he paid for our tickets. I was hoping he would kiss me that night, but my roommate decided to walk with us back to my dorm and totally ruined the romantic vibe." HOW HE PROPOSED: On the way to a walk in Georgetown, "I decided to grab the ring and see what happened," Johnathan says. When the time seemed right, he popped the question. STUPIDEST FIGHT: Over his gastrointestinal tract. "He is lactose-intolerant and continues to drink milk and eat ice cream, and I was fed up." MAKING IT UNIQUE: In addition to their cake, they'll have a candy table filled with nostalgic candy from their childhoods like candy dots, Now and Laters, and Pixie Stix.

David Morgan, Bobbi Waller

David, 30, is a contract specialist with the Department of the Navy. Bobbi, 30, is an HR specialist with the State Department. They live in Upper Marlboro, Md.

THE MAIN EVENT: A destination wedding in Jamaica on Nov. 15. HOW THEY MET: On Metro, but they never talked until they randomly "met" on MySpace and realized they knew each other from Metro. FIRST DATE: A club in Adams Morgan. "Of course, she wasn't ready to go. I sat in the car for 30 minutes waiting for her to get dressed." FIRST KISS: After their second date (at Olive Garden). "I thought if she smacked me, I would blame it on the one glass of wine I had." HOW HE PROPOSED: New Year's Eve. On the way home, she was driving, and he mumbled, "I want to make an honest woman out of you." "I cried and cried. I had to wait about 15 minutes before I could drive, because I looked like I was the drunken passenger!"

Rustin Mackey, Allison Remski

Rustin, 27, is a canine handler. Allison, also 27, is a management analyst. They live in Chantilly, Va.

THE MAIN EVENT: A small ceremony in Baltimore on Feb. 25, with 50 close relatives and friends flying in. HOW THEY MET: On Hotornot.com. "I thought it would be funny to post a profile," Allison says. "I had no idea you could really meet people." FIRST IMPRESSIONS: "She is hot and out of my league." "He was so sweet and respectful and interested in me being happy." FIRST DATE: Dinner at On the Border Mexican Grill, then her place for Wii bowling, in which "I kicked his butt." FIRST KISS: In her garage as he was leaving, after Wii bowling. "She acted like she was waiting for a kiss, and I definitely wanted to kiss her, so I did." HOW HE PROPOSED: On Christmas Eve, as she was putting cards on the mantel. When she turned around, he was down on one knee. THEIR SONG: "God Gave Me You" by Blake Shelton. "The lyrics fit perfectly," Allison says. "He is always there for me through the good and the ugly." MOST-HATED CLOTHING ITEM: His "Office Space" button-up shirt.

“The Washington Wizards are a mess.”

— TRUTHABOUTIT.NET analyzes the state of the squad after Saturday night's 107-81 blowout loss to the Clippers at Verizon Center.

“Arizona has been at the forefront of national concerns about how we treat minorities in this country, which is a euphemized way of saying that it has developed a reputation for serious ethnic problems. State Rep. Cecil Ash's proposal that a Latin American celebratory holiday be accompanied by a statewide ‘Caucasian Day’ is really not helping. Plus, don't we already celebrate white people on July 4?”

— Frances Martel at MEDIATE.COM is a bit stunned by Ash's idea after Arizona Rep. Richard Miranda, a Democrat, proposed a Latin American day for the state on the legislature floor last week.

“Very disappointed with the rampant commercialization of the Puppy Bowl. I remember when it was about the game.”

— @GOBBLERCOUNTRY pokes fun at the Animal Planet event that aired Sunday before Super Bowl XLVI.

Blog Log

“Ok Go is one of the few groups that actually put something new out there when they do a video. Their films are always innovative and both creative and technical achievements.”

— San Agustin at KICKSTARTBOOM.COM enjoyed the group's new video for “Needing/Getting,” in which the group drives in a Chevy Sonic that was outfitted with retractable pneumatic arms designed to play the instruments.

“Ford's not pleased with the Chevy truck super bowl ad that implies Ford trucks aren't built tough enough to survive the Mayan apocalypse. How upset are they? They're so [upset], the automaker's sent letters to both GM and NBC asking them to pull the ad from tonight's big game. Well, shoot, this may be more fun than the Super Bowl itself.”

— Matt Hardigree at JALOPNIK.COM reacts to news that Ford reportedly sent a cease-and-desist order to General Motors about its ad, which questions a Ford truck's durability.

Experiencing thoughts of sadness, hopelessness, guilt, worthlessness, lacking interest in everyday activities you once enjoyed?

Research studies (outpatient or inpatient) are conducted at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland. Participants must be free of other serious medical conditions. Research evaluations and medications are provided at no cost. Compensation is provided for research procedures and brain imaging.

Horoscope

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If it's bargains you're looking for, you can certainly find some today — but you may have to look in some unusual places.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You're seeking a way out of a current situation, but you may be acting prematurely. Things have a way of working out — and they will soon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Contact from an old friend reminds you of something that has been missing for some time. Today is the day to get it back.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Unusual behavior on your part is likely to spark criticism from some, and others are likely to mount an investigation of sorts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may feel as though your privacy is being threatened. Now is no time to run and hide; express your objections directly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can learn a great deal today from watching others do what should not be done. Even a negative example is better than no example at all.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You've been surprised at the content of your dreams of late — and today you have the chance to analyze imagery and symbols in some detail.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are not comfortable with the instructions you've been given, but you know you must follow them if progress is to be made.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Someone in charge may be trying to fit you into a mold that is ill-fitting and quite uncomfortable for you. Explain what you'd rather do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may feel like time is running short, but you actually have plenty of time to do what you have promised to do. Don't panic!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You are working closely with a partner to reach a new agreement of some sort. Don't make the mistake of assuming anything.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are ready to forge ahead, but first you must deal head-on with certain issues that have yet to be resolved to your satisfaction.

EXCUSES TO MEET ACTORS

You May Now Forget About This Award Until Next Year

Jason Segel has been honored as Man of the Year by Harvard University's Hasty Pudding Theatricals. He got the traditional pudding pot Friday evening after a roast. Segel plays Marshall Eriksen on the CBS comedy "How I Met Your Mother." He co-wrote and starred in last year's "The Muppets." And on Friday he sang a version of "Rainbow Connection" written by the troupe. (AP)
